EXHIBITIONS AND PUBLICATIONS HAVE EXERTED UPON BOOKBINDING
AS A FINE ART

FOREWORDS

THE present exhibition had its origin in the intention of Mr. Samuel Putnam Avery to add to the Avery Architectural Library, founded at Columbia University by himself and Mrs. Avery in memory of their son, Henry Ogden Avery, his entire collection of books relating to the history of bookbinding and the development of the art from the technical side. He desired that the books might be seen together and examined before being put upon the shelves of the library. As several of the most important of them had been especially and handsomely bound by skilled artists within the last three decades, at the earnest solicitation of the Librarian of the University Mr. Avery consented to supplement this display of the practical side by lending from his collection a selection of such examples of bookbindings as would further illustrate the artistic side, and convey to the students of Columbia and visitors a glimpse of the various styles of decoration applied to bookbindings by the workers of other and earlier periods, as well as by those of our own time. The space for the exhibition being limited, as well as the resources of the lender, any deficiencies must be attributed to these facts.

FOREWORDS

This Catalogue, therefore, has been prepared in two parts, the first showing in chronological order the works on book-binding practical and historical, Nos. 1 to 120 bis. While this section makes no pretence at bibliographically exhausting this side of the subject, it is believed that the most important as well as the earliest published practical works in English and French are included in the list, down to the last work on the subject by that most accomplished of women bookbinders, Miss S. T. Prideaux, in her "Bookbinders and their craft," 1903.

With reference to the collection of examples of book-bindings of the 16th to 19th centuries shown in the second part, Nos. 121 to 243, it should be borne in mind that Mr. Avery in gathering specimens of bindings did not set out to illustrate the history of the art in any connected manner. Each example was chosen for its particular merit as a fine piece of work for the time in which it was made, without regard to linking one period or era closely with another. Consequently many historically connecting links will be found wanting, and the names of a number of famous bookbinders will be looked for in vain. Nevertheless a good idea of the style of decoration used at prominent periods in the historical development of the art may be obtained even from the single specimen of a period sometimes shown, by reason of its excellence as a representative piece of work. The examples have been arranged in the Catalogue as nearly as possible in the probable order of their execution, grouped by countries under each century, and with a view to their relative importance in illustrating the development of the art of bookbinding.

The German blind-stamped bindings of the 16th century have been placed first, not only as forming a class by themselves, but as serving also to illustrate the characteristics of the bindings of the preceding eras. The leather of calf or pigskin was stamped by means of small dies representing biblical, mythological or classical subjects, portraits or purely conventional designs, sometimes bearing a date, and used on books of all kinds without any reference to the fitness of the design to the contents of the book. The introduction of gold-tooling by the Italians late in the 15th century speedily led to its general adoption elsewhere, and with it an oriental style of ornamentation, showing the Arabic or Saracenic origin of this kind of decoration. Aldus made use of an arabesque ornament of solid face, a style that still bears his name, "Aldine." Later the tools were crossed or shaded with parallel lines and formed the style called "azured." Gold-tooling in lines, straight and curved, developed into the geometrical figures preferred by Grolier and the elaborate patterns of Maioli, with their azured and openwork arabesque ornamentation, of such exquisite design and workmanship as to command the admiration and imitation of the best workers of all succeeding periods. Contemporary with these we have in France the famous Lyonnese painted bindings. Early in the 17th century, under royal patronage, we find the Èves introducing elaborate gold-tooled framework interlacings, with compartments filled with laurel and palm branches, and graceful scrolls; later the still more delicate dotted-face lines and dentelle or lace-work patterns and borders of Le Gascon appear. Choice examples of these several styles are to be found in this collection. Some notable bindings in embroidery executed in England, Holland and France in the 17th century are shown, and also a few of later date. The German book-covers executed in repoussé silver and in engraved pierce-work, in silver and silver-gilt, are fine specimens of 18th century art. It should be noted that these elaborately wrought covers are generally to be found on German books of a religious character, the cover sometimes being of a much earlier date than the book which has been fitted into it.

A bold specimen of gold-tooling, from the hand of the elder Padeloup, executed for Louis XV, is in marked contrast with the style of Le Gascon of earlier date, and with that on a volume bound by Derome for Louis XVI. A single example of the work of Roger Payne serves to show the characteristic handiwork of that original genius and master of the craft in England. Three pieces of English work should be specially noted, as fine examples of painting executed upon the sloping front edge of a book, under the gilding.

The bookbindings of more recent times in the exhibition, and described in this Catalogue, were executed mainly to the order and under the direction of Mr. Avery. In the year 1867, the year of the great Paris Universal Exposition, at which he was agent in charge of the works of art from the United States, he began giving orders to different bookbinders, mainly in France, following up this custom during his subsequent visits abroad. Since ceasing his annual trips he has continued to the present time purchasing books and having them bound by various binders of note, and employing new ones as they came under his observation. In making these collections Mr. Avery has had the valuable aid of his old friend Mr. George A. Lucas, long a resident in Paris. From the names of the artists represented, and by their various styles of work, the modern art may safely be said to be fully and fitly illustrated.

Mr. Avery made the personal acquaintance of these honorable workers, gained their confidence and their desire to do their best for him. Some of them he had recognized very early in their careers, purchasing from their works displayed at the various International Expositions, and continuing to give them commissions as long as they lived. All have generously acknowledged his liberality and appreciation of their efforts. Their entire devotion to their art won his respect and admiration, to which in this place he is glad to bear witness, and to record his gratitude for their skill and friendship. No books have been added to these selections from his library merely on account of the personality of their original owners, or from their having armorial bearings or monograms, but rather to show the various styles of decoration applied to the binding of books by artists of our own and of earlier days.

In compiling the Catalogue title-pages have been followed closely, and full collations have been given; the measurements indicated are of the covers. An attempt has been made, and it is hoped with some degree of success, to describe the bindings more minutely than has been the custom heretofore in this country, with a view to establishing a precedent for more exact work along these lines in the future, so that when the treasures bibliographic and bibliopegic of our American collectors are described hereafter, it may be with a fulness better proportioned to their real value.

FOREWORDS

Full recognition is gladly made here of the very valuable work done in arranging this exhibition by Vladimir Gr. Simkhovitch, Ph. D., Bibliographer to the Library, and for his expert advice in classifying and describing the bindings.

[2] l. 549 [21] p. [2] l. 13.3 × 7.6 cm.

French binding of the 17th century. Light-brown morocco, full gold tooled. Border a four-line fillet, outer lines broken into dashes and dots; corners filled with gold ornaments; central oval panel enclosed in two olive branches, with a crown at the top and an L at the bottom. Above the crown an escutcheon charged with three fleurs-de-lis, at the bottom another charged with three annulets. Lettered in center panel "EX DONO D. CLAVDII TAPIN 1655." Edges gilt; marbled paper linings.

From the collection of Henry S. Richardson, and exhibited at Ironmonger's Hall, London, in 1861. Presented to Mr. Avery by Rush C. Hawkins. In the letter of gift, laid in the volume, he writes: "The opus was bound, no doubt, at the instance of D. Claudin, and by him presented to Louis XIV of France. Item No. 1630 in the sale of the Marquis de Morante was a copy of Suetonius, bound and tooled like this and inscribed 'Ex Dono D. Claudii Tisserand 1652.' In that year this giver of artistic gifts was a weaver, probably, of carpets, and in 1655, the date of the Cicero binding, we are led to believe he was a dealer in them."

English binding of the late 17th or early 18th century. Full black morocco; fine gold tooling. The sides have a rectangular panel outlined with a plain two-line fillet, enclosing a lozenge formed by short flat dotted curves springing from points. The center ornament is made up of graceful foliated scrolls enclosing flowers, the outer ones terminating in falcons' heads. The inner corners of the rectangle are filled with similar tooling; small circles are interspersed throughout. Similar scrolls form the body of the dentelle border around the panel. From its corners project fine lozenge-shaped foliations. Inside the outer roll-produced border is a line of flat dotted curves, from the ends of which spring pointers, also dotted. The back panels have scroll borders enclosing small circles, and an ornament. Edges gilt. Linings of dark figured silk. The gold tooling is largely in the Le Gascon style. This binding is characteristic of the English-bound books of this period.

161 Koran.

An Arabic ms. beautifully written in black and red, 14 lines to the page; text, within gold and blue fillets, measures 7.5 × 4.5 cm. On each page a handsome foliated border wholly in gold. Anwān (double title-page), with floriations in red and yellow on blue and gold grounds, somewhat rubbed. Written on 309 folios of extremely thin paper.

[3] l. [617] p. [4] l. 11.1 × 7 cm.

Persian binding of the 17th century. In leather, sides painted with leaves and flowers of various colors over gold, within a single-line border. Back decorated with maroon ornaments on a gold ground. Doublures painted in gold, red and black on a light brown ground, with border, corners and center-piece ornamented in red, white and gold floriations on a black ground.

162 Book of prayers.

An Arabic ms. written in black between gold ruled lines, with interlineations in red. Green and gold lines with blue fillets border each page inside an outer two-line border in black. Anwāns (two double title-pages) beautifully illuminated with a Persian design in bands of blue and red, with black and white borders; floriated in gold, orange and pink. Two other pages have colored illustrations, very crude in design and coloring, evidently by a much later hand, apparently a plan of the Great Mosque and Kaaba at Mecca; while a third has a floriated border daintily executed in gold tipped with colors.

[2] l. [180] p. [2] l. 15.7 × 9.8 cm.

Persian binding of the 18th century. In leather covered with a green varnish or glaze, on which is painted in gold and colors a border of flowers and leaves within fillets of gold, white and red, enclosing a panel with gold leaves as inner border and flowers in corners, and floriated center-piece.

163 Koran case.

12 × 8.7 cm.

Hammered silver, gilt and chased. Front, cover and ends set with pieces of coral, with a large green cut stone in the raised center, within a six-pointed star in cable-work. Panel studded with round bits of coral. Outer border of flower-shaped pieces of coral, with larger corner pieces, the settings connected by filigree work forming the stems. Small raised bosses interspersed among the corals. The outer border of fine cable-work within two-line corded fillets. Cover and ends set with bits of coral between rows of small bosses. On back a beautiful cable border woven of three distinct wires and set in, between beaded fillets. Corners and center panel of hammered work; a six-pointed star filled in and surrounded by oriental foliations. Hinges and fastenings of cover of wound wire. Two pins held by triple link-chains with coral set ornaments are used to fasten the lid. Ornamented loops at ends for strap. A very choice example of oriental work, probably Persian.

164 Koran case.

15.1 × 11.2 cm.

Silver and silver-gilt, repoussé, pierced and chased. Center panel of front in open-work, with a circular center in relief, over a silver background; scroll-work and foliations of oriental design, probably Persian; front, ends, bottom and cover of fine workmanship; back ungilt, of much cruder design and work, hand stamped; in center a six-pointed star connected by ornaments and rope-like bands to the inner corners of the panel. A Russia leather strap with brass ornaments hooked to fastenings on the ends, by which to carry it.

Dark blue morocco extra, inlaid with citron and red morocco. The framework is a beautiful panel of the cottage pattern surrounded by graceful scrolls, from which spring the stems of large flowers finely inlaid in citron and red. In the center is inlaid a small square in citron with cantled sides, from which spring the stems of other inlaid flowers. This square is itself inlaid with a cross in red. The inner angles of the framework are filled with gold-tooled scrolls. Acorns, small circles and stars are also introduced. With the exception of the two-line fillet which outlines the inside of the framework, the gold tooling is wholly in the Le Gascon dotted line. The back panels are also inlaid and tooled with gold ornaments. Some of the flowers on the sides are painted in violet. Edges gilt and goffered. Linings of foliated gilt paper. Book-plate of "Richard Palmer Esq." The book formerly had clasps.

211 Horace.

The works of Quintus Horatius Flaccus illustrated chiefly from the remains of ancient art. With a Life by the Rev. Henry Hart Milman, Canon of St. Peter's, Rector of St. Margaret's, Westminster. London, John Murray. MD-CCCXLIX.

[2] l. [vi] 194 [4] 490, xiv p. [3] l. ill. col. title-pages and borders. 22.3 × 14.7 cm.

Modern French binding. Full crushed citron levant, inlaid by Canape-Belz, gilded by Domont. Obverse cover has a four-band gold-filletted border of inlays of maroon, green and blue, with a plain inner panel bordered by a single band of blue. In the space between, inlaid in white morocco, is reproduced the colored border to the title-page of the first book of the Carmina, a conventional grape-vine with leaves and fruit, inlaid in blue, green, red, maroon and cream color, with delicately gold-tooled fruit and tendrils. On the reverse between inner inlaid borders of light blue, gold-tooled with an Etruscan figure, is reproduced the border to the colored title of the Epistles, a beautiful floral and foliated scroll-work of gold tooling with inlays of green, maroon and white, on a ground of very dark blue. The back panels have inlaid borders of maroon, green and blue, with inlays and toolings like the sides. In center panel of the first doublé is a medallion portrait of Horace in gold, in relief. The panel has a narrow filletted border of inlaid dark maroon; the outer borders, bands of maroon, blue and green; in space between, the colored title-page border of the Satires, an Etruscan border of very narrow inlaid bands of blue, green and maroon between lines of gold, with gold rosettes with crimson centers on the maroon squares enclosed. On the second doublé within the outer border of bands of inlaid green and blue, on an inlaid white ground, are six gold-filletted inlaid bands of green and blue interlaced. Lining of yellow watered silk; morocco joints; edges gilded over marbling. A most exquisite example of book-making and book-finishing with mosaic work and fine gold-tooling. Bound expressly for Mr. Avery. In a satin-lined morocco box.

XVITH TO SIXTH CENTURIES

No. 82 on Japanese paper; two copies of each illustration. Modern French binding. Full crushed heliotrope levant with inlays by Charles Meunier. On obverse, within a three-line gold fillet, is a framework of elaborate design inlaid in narrow bands of black, blue and bright green interlaced and enclosed within each other, and fastened with maroon bands at the corners; between the inner black band and the green is tooled a beaded chain in gold links enclosing dark green ovals and black roundels inlaid. Inside these a beautiful, vertical, small-tool floral border, with bow-knots at corners, all in gold, encloses the plain center panel. In the corners are inlaid heart-shaped shields of apple-green tooled with billing doves, Cupid's weapons and musical instruments. Through the framework is intertwined a rope of gold-tooled flowers. In a few spaces are tooled pierced hearts crowned with a wreath. On the reverse the floral border is outside the framework and within a triple-line ornamental fillet. The frame is of an inlaid black band, with a semi-spiral gold line in center, with three plain gold lines on each side, forming a rectangle cantled at the corners; inside this is an oval black band between two-line fillets, hung on the inside with rich floral garlands in gold; the cantled corners are foliated and in each stands a vase of flowers; the inner angles are filled with scroll work, cornucopias, foliations and birds; at bottom of oval panel a vase of flowers above billing doves; at the top a flaming torch rests between rich foliations. On the smooth back a line of flowers between two inlaid black borders. Title-panel in green between blue false bands. Doublures of peacock blue crushed levant within a narrow engrailed floral fillet. On obverse cover is a rustic framework, entwined with foliated branches hung with floral garlands; on this are perched Cupids inlaid in white and flesh tinted holding flowers; at the top one swings with a gold cup in his hand; at the bottom two are blowing bubbles from a bowl inlaid in dark brown; in the center on a large insect inlaid in pale green rides a Cupid holding a parasol of crimson and gold; small gold butterflies flit among the flowers. On the reverse within a combination fan and curve border is a vertical frame inlaid with olive green morocco beaded with gold dots, cantled at corners, bottom and sides, with double arch at the top; richly tooled with gold foliations and other ornaments; Cupids in the cantled corners; flaming torch at top between the arches, with billing doves within foliations below; in cantled space at bottom Cupid's weapons; vase of flowers in panel above; center panel enclosed by a small tool floral border; butterfly and birds tooled on the panel. Linings of blue gros-grain silk; marbled end-papers; edges gilt. One of the finest examples of Meunier's work.

221 Deck, Théodore.

La Faïence, par Théodore Deck, céramiste. Paris, Quantin [1887]. Nouvelle édition (Bibliothèque de l'Enseignement des beaux-arts).
